Daryl Hannah

The actress, 54, stars in* Sense8, *a new sci-fi drama on Netflix

Why a show about people who are telepathically linked?
I love the concept of interconnectedness. The show deals with it in creative ways, and there's also profound themes that I really resonate with.

Are you into sci-fi?
I love science fiction and anything that makes your imagination soar!

Lessons from My Father

It really warmed my heart to read Bryce Dallas Howard's "Lessons from My Father" article. She spoke so lovingly about her dad, Ron Howard, and what it was like growing up with him. What a wonderful childhood memory. I am sure that's why she turned out to be such a loving person herself.

Caitlyn Jenner

The first time I saw a photo of Bruce Jenner after he won the Olympics, something seemed off to me. I was young and couldn't put my finger on it. Now I get it. Caitlyn has emerged, and she can be who she was always meant to be. Good for Caitlyn for living her authentic self at last.
Jane Harvath Pittsburgh

I fully support Caitlyn in her transition. It's also wonderful that it's so public, because America needs more education about the trans community.
Katy Dyer via people.com

Beau Biden

Beau Biden should have been on the cover instead of Bruce Jenner, now Caitlyn. The untimely death from brain cancer of the son of the sitting Vice President, who was also a veteran and a politician, deserved more coverage.

JOHN STAMOS' DUI ARREST

OUT OF CONTROL

BY JULIE JORDAN

HE WAS PULLED OVER in Beverly Hills on June 12 and charged with a DUI, but when John Stamos took to Twitter the next day, the star, 51, had a somewhat surprising reaction. "Thanks to everyone for their love and support," he wrote. "Very appreciative of BHPD and Cedars [Sinai Medical Center] for their care." Just what Stamos was treated for remains a mystery. What's not in doubt is that the actor was driving erratically through the wealthy California community. Although they cited him for driving under the influence, officers later stated Stamos was "having a medical condition," and he was not given a field sobriety test. It's not the first time Stamos has raised eyebrows. →

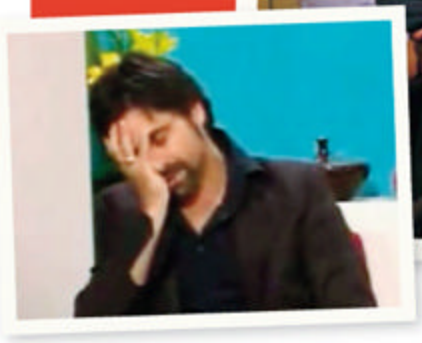

A friend says Stamos is claiming the DUI charge to be a onetime mistake: "This was a bad time, bad place happening."

ALEX J. BERLINER/ABIMAGES

The actor (right, in his new FOX series Grandfathered) appeared drunk on a talk show in 2007 (below).

He has playfully referred to his past behavior, telling pal Howard Stern he went "crazy" and "passed out" during a night with wife Rebecca Romijn. (They divorced in 2005.) In 2007, while doing publicity for ER, Stamos made lewd gestures and slurred his words when he appeared live on an Australian talk show. Initially his conduct was blamed on sleeping pills and jet lag, but in an interview with The Advocate two years later, he confessed, "I was also just plastered. I never said I wasn't, but that whole publicity machine got involved and said, 'Just say he was jet-lagged.'"

The incident comes at a time when the actor's career has been going strong. A star and producer of the Netflix Full House spinoff Fuller House, Stamos is also the lead in a new FOX sitcom, Grandfathered. But away from the cameras, a friend says, "even though John remains confident and cool, there's been a change in the past two years." One huge hurdle was the death last September of his mom, Loretta, whom the actor called "the love of my life." Says another pal: "That was crushing for him. He did his best to stay strong, but he absolutely fell apart."

'WHEN HIS MOM PASSED AWAY LAST YEAR, THAT WAS CRUSHING FOR HIM. HE DID HIS BEST TO STAY STRONG, BUT HE ABSOLUTELY FELL APART' – A FRIEND OF STAMOS'

His friend is hopeful that the actor has already turned a corner. "John has always drunk socially. At one point, it was a problem. But this is not that time in his life."

JOSH WIGGINS

After posting YouTube videos with his friends, the 16-year-old was discovered by a casting agent and chosen as a lead for his first film, 2014's Hellion. Now the Houston-born actor stars in Max—a war drama (out June 26) about a teen's emotional bond with his deceased military brother's service dog. "My dad works with bomb dogs, so he gave me a rundown of what you can and can't do with them," says Wiggins.

A NASTY REALITY TV SPLIT

THE COUPLE'S MARRIAGE IMPLODES AS CASTRO SEEKS A RESTRAINING ORDER

Six months after tying the knot on A&E's hit Married at First Sight (the show's premise: Couples paired by experts meet for the first time on their wedding day), Ryan De Nino, 29, and Jessica Castro, 30, "are going through a tough divorce," says a production source, who confirms the receptionist filed a restraining order against De Nino. "They went into this thinking it would be forever," adds a Castro pal. "To see it work out this way is really sad." –MELODY CHIU

THE WILLISES

TV'S NEW FAMILY AFFAIR

THERE ARE 14 OF THEM, AND THEY SING! ARE THEY THE NEXT SUPERSIZE SENSATION?

CLOCKWISE, FROM LEFT: Joy Anna, 8, Jessica, 23, Jeremiah, 22, Jackson, 17, Jenny, 20, Brenda, 46, Toby, 45, Jasmine, 13, Jeanette, 19, Juliette, 12, Jedidiah, 15, Jada, 4, Jaeger, 5, Jamie, 10.

"Everyone has their own personality," says Jenny of the family (on the porch of their Tennessee home).

Seated at the big kitchen table at their home in Nashville, Brenda and Toby Willis list off the comparisons they've heard about their musically inclined family. "The Partridge Family, the Von Trapps, the Osmonds—all of that," says Brenda with a smile. But the proud parents of 12 don't take all the credit for the growing success of their family band. "We were just following a path, and we weren't sure where it was going," she says. "It's a roller coaster. Wherever the track goes, up and down, we just need to put our hands up." Since appearing on season 9 of America's Got Talent in 2014, the Christian family released their third album, an Irish pop mix titled Heaven, and landed their own reality series on TLC, where cameras follow the kids as they balance their budding careers with homeschooling, rehearsals and everyday life. While their conservative beliefs (they don't believe in premarital sex and don't drink alcohol) play a big part in the Willis household, Brenda and Toby keep an open mind when it comes to raising their kids. "We didn't have a lot of restrictions," says oldest daughter Jessica. "It wasn't like, 'Don't do this!' It was more like, 'Try this or that.' We're always encouraged to do more things, but our parents are right there to catch us if it is a bridge too far." As for managing such a large brood, oldest son Jeremiah says it's a group effort: "My parents try to keep a handle on it, but they can't be everywhere. It's good training for when I'm a parent!" Now there are more perks to go with that responsibility, adds Jessica: "It's cool to see our faces on shirts and billboards. We're just enjoying the moments." –EMILY STROHM

The girls practicing in the family's basement. "Jenny gets the most wedding proposals," says Jessica. "And Jeanette flirts back with everybody. She's hilarious."

THE 28-YEAR-OLD CHOREOGRAPHER, CREATIVE GURU AND JUDGE ON TRUTV'S REALITY TALENT SHOW FAKE OFF (WEDNESDAYS AT 10 P.M.) SPILLS HIS SECRETS

His job can be glamorous, but it can get pretty messy

"I was on Ariana [Grande's] video for 'Love Me Harder,' and she asked if I could get in the sandbox with her and help her with movement. I completely trashed the $1,200 Louboutins I was in!"

His on-again, off-again girlfriend Jennifer Lopez is not his favorite person to work with

. . . But that's only because he has more than one! "I have a top four. Nicki [Minaj] and I just click really well and I love her music. Nick Jonas is so young but extremely focused and great to work with. Jennifer [Lopez] crushes everything that you give to her. Jessie J is like a comedian. She's hilarious."

He has a method for dealing with demanding stars

"As much as you want it to be your show, you're not the one onstage. You can argue your point, but if it gets shut down, it gets shut down, and that's that. You have to handle it with grace."

The singer's NBC variety show I Can Do That airs Tuesdays at 10 p.m.

Sunday, 12:30 a.m.
CLUB TAKEOVER
I'm not a big clubber, but I love deejaying. I typically like to close with R. Kelly's "Ignition" remix since it always gets people going.

3 a.m.
OH, SIN CITY
I saw this couple after leaving the club. It's just classic "What happens in Vegas, stays in Vegas."

6 a.m.
BREAKFAST OF CHAMPIONS
We pulled an all-nighter since it was an early flight, so I had a beer with breakfast at the airport lounge. It was good!

11 a.m.
HELLO, FLORIDA
Just six hours before, we were in a Vegas club! I am such a beach person, and it was just beautiful.

3 p.m.
AFTERNOON PICK-ME-UP
Starbucks gets me through late nights. My go-to is an iced soy latte.

9 p.m.
PUMPING UP THE PARTY
It was like playing a rock show. It was all ages, so they were there for you and not fighting to get to the bar.

Monday, back to L.A.
SEE YOU SOON, BUDDY

Remembering Christopher Lee

Distinguished British actor Sir Christopher Lee died on June 7 at the age of 93. Lee—survived by his wife of 54 years, Birgit, who released the news, and his daughter Christina, 51—served in the Royal Air Force during World War II, retiring in 1946 and beginning a film career that spanned 69 years and more than 200 films. He is best known for playing villains, from his iconic role as Dracula in the 1958 film Horror of Dracula to Count Dooku in the Star Wars franchise and Saruman the White in the Lord of the Rings trilogy. He also ventured into music in 2010, when he recorded his own symphonic metal album. But movies were his enduring passion: "Making films has never just been a job to me," he said in a 2013 interview. "It is my life."

PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

Jerry Seinfeld

The comedian, 61, helps reunite fathers with their children and provide resources to dads in need

My wife, Jessica, founded the Baby Buggy charity to help new families, and for years we saw so many where the father was not a part of the child's life. And that's a very big factor in perpetuating the poverty cycle. So we decided to attack that aspect with the Baby Buggy Fatherhood Initiative, which tries to help men connect with their children. We do this event where we set up an amusement park, and fathers spend time with their kids for the first time. You just see the look in their eyes when they're with their kids—that look a man gets when he knows he's a father; there's nothing else in life that puts that look on his face. It's just the nicest thing to see. Fatherhood is this journey of discovery—these instincts and feelings come out. The goal is just to make a family. –REPORTED BY GABRIELLE OLYA

In March Seinfeld hosted Baby Buggy's inaugural Los Angeles Fatherhood Initiative lunch, which raised nearly $250,000.

Poehler and Smith are perfect foils as Joy and Sadness.

DISNEY PIXAR

No. 1 Inside Out

A little girl's emotions struggle to figure out what makes her tick in Pixar's latest winner

MOVIE ANIMATED What does Pixar do better than anyone else? Sadness. No, really: Toy Story, Up and this glorious journey into the mind of a little girl are all about dealing with loss. This time, Sadness (Phyllis Smith) has a voice; so do Joy (Amy Poehler), Fear (Bill Hader), Disgust (Mindy Kaling) and Anger (the exquisitely cast Lewis Black). They're emotions inside Riley (Kaitlyn Dias), an 11-year-old hockey player moving to a new town. The story is a road trip of sorts for Joy and Sadness, who have to navigate the loopy world in Riley's head to get back to headquarters. Since it's Pixar, you can expect to marvel at the animation, laugh a lot and cry a little. But you'll leave with joy. (June 19, PG)

No. 2 The Overnight

MOVIE COMEDY A dinner party goes wildly sideways for new-in-town couple Alex (Adam Scott) and Emily (Taylor Schilling) in a raunchy comedy of manners. Full-frontal male nudity aside, Overnight is actually a sweet film about how hard it is for adults to be friends. (June 19, R)

No. 3 Tori Kelly, Unbreakable Smile

No. 4 True Detective

Genuinely suspenseful—eventually

TV DRAMA Bending over backward to reinvent itself after season 1, Detective nearly slips a disc. This time we begin with the familiar elements of L.A. noir—kink, sleaze, bruised beauty and a corrupt thug (Vince Vaughn) fond of hard-boiled palaver: "Never do anything out of hunger, not even eating." The premiere demands patience as the narrative is set up, bringing together investigators Colin Farrell, Rachel McAdams and Taylor Kitsch. Then it turns truly addictive. Great cast. (HBO, June 21, 9 p.m.)

Take that, Taylor Swift! Miranda Sings parodies "Shake It Off."

No. 5 Miranda Sings

YOUTUBE COMEDY Miranda does sing. It's just that she ignores the notes and keeps the camera aimed in close-up at her cavernous, lipstick-smeared mouth. (When the mouth is closed, it tilts up into a schoolgirl smirk.) And yet Miranda Sings, played by Colleen Ballinger, has 506 million YouTube views, and she'll release a book, Self-Help, in July. Dwayne Johnson is solid—and stylish!—in his first series

TV COMEDY Johnson is the rare muscle god who moves between Olympus and ordinary life with ease—with no heavy Schwarzeneggerian irony or winking. His follow-up to two summer blockbusters, Furious 7 and San Andreas, is this casual Miami-set series about pro football. He's Spencer Strasmore, a retired player now working in the management end of things, trying to clinch deals and smooth big, erratic egos. The show oozes money, sunlight and sex, and Johnson, beautifully suited up, is as monumentally chic as a South Beach high-rise. (HBO, June 21, 10 p.m.)

PRISON BREAK DRAMA

SEDUCED BY KILLERS

POLICE SAY SMALL-TOWN PRISON SEAMSTRESS JOYCE MITCHELL SWOONED FOR 2 CONVICTED MURDERERS—AND HELPED THEM PLAN THEIR SHOCKING ESCAPE

The Getaway The plan, police say, was for a smitten Mitchell to meet Matt (center) and Sweat outside these 30-ft. walls.

Residents in sleepy Dickinson Center, N.Y., knew Joyce "Tillie" Mitchell as the proud military mom and devoted fireman's wife who nestled ceramic frogs in her flower beds and, in her free time, pitched in making dinner for the crew at the local firehouse—someone so trustworthy the town voted her tax collector. Twice. "She's very responsible," says neighbor Sharon Currier. "She's a hard worker. Always took her boy to church every Sunday." But to hear prosecutors tell it, it was a wholly other Mitchell who showed up for work every day at the maximum-security Clinton Correctional Facility in Dannemora. That Mitchell, they say, got too close to a pair of inmates she oversaw in the prison tailor shop, specifically two of the facility's most cunning and cruel killers, Richard W. Matt and David Sweat. Now Matt and Sweat are on the loose, Mitchell is in jail—charged with smuggling them the hacksaw and other tools they used to break out—and her shocked friends are trying to put the pieces together. "I can't figure out why she would do something so stupid," says Currier.

Mitchell, 51, faces a felony charge of promoting prison contraband, plus a misdemeanor charge of facilitating escape. (She has pleaded not guilty to both counts.) Her alleged role as accomplice to Matt and Sweat's brazen June 6 escape left two dangerous killers at large. (At press time the pair were still on the run.) Matt, 48, was doing 25 years to life for murder and dismemberment; Sweat, 35, was serving life without parole for killing a sheriff's deputy by shooting him more than 12 times and running him over with a car. The massive manhunt under way—more than 800 local, state and federal officers combing every inch of 8,300 surrounding acres so far—suggests just how dangerous the pair is. "Those men are desperate. They won't go down without a fight," says a New York police source. "If this were a war footing, we'd call it DEFCON 1. That's how serious it is."

'A Good Mom' Tobey Mitchell (with his mom and her husband, Lyle) told CNN she "definitely" wouldn't have an affair with an inmate. At left: their home in Dickinson.

The pair's elaborate, made-for-Hollywood prison break was equally dramatic. Through good behavior, they'd earned adjacent cells in the facility's honor block, where they wore civilian clothes and moved about unaccompanied by guards—privileges that also, it seems, allowed them to hatch a plan to break through the walls of their cells, cut into a 24-inch pipe between prison walls and slither through that pipe to a manhole on the outside. "This plan took weeks or months, and they had to do practice runs," says former New York City police commissioner Bernard Kerik, who did three years in federal prison on tax-fraud charges and is now a prison-management consultant. "I'm dying to know the brain surgeon who allowed these two in an honor block."

But the real secret to their success was winning Mitchell's help. It appears that Sweat was the first to hook Mitchell's affections, says Clinton County D.A. Andrew Wylie. Mitchell, who is remarried after her first marriage ended amid allegations of her cheating, was previously investigated "on suspicion of having a personal relationship" with the younger of the two escapees. And it was that inquiry, closed at the time for lack of sufficient evidence, that led police to seek Mitchell for questioning when the pair was discovered missing. They found her hospitalized, complaining of a panic attack. When state police finally got to question her—in two 10-hour interrogations—they concluded, said Wylie, that "she gave them the tools that helped them break out. Then she was going to drive both escapees in the getaway car." By then it was Matt whom Mitchell had reportedly fallen for and who planned to put a hit on her second husband, Lyle Mitchell, a fellow prison employee. "She agreed to drive them for a number of hours through rough terrain," says Wylie. "But she told investigators she did not know where they were headed." Reality—and panic—set in when it was time to ren-

ANATOMY OF AN ESCAPE

1. Last seen June 5 at the 10:30 p.m. "standing count" of inmates, Matt and Sweat apparently used tools supplied by Mitchell to cut a hole in the steel wall of their adjacent cells. 2. On a cut steam pipe, they left a taunting note with an Asian caricature. 3. The men scaled internal catwalks. 4. To reach the manhole outside the prison's 30-ft.-high walls, the inmates crawled through a 24-inch tunnel.

dezvous at the manhole cover. Says Wylie: "She had a moment where she realized, 'What am I doing?'"

But experts and fellow prison employees say it's not uncommon for inmates and workers to bond. "We're human," explains one retiree from nearby Franklin Correctional Facility. "And the inmates are around you enough on a daily basis to know your weak spots and use that to their gain." Terry Pelz, a former Texas prison warden, says the seduction is more common with female workers and starts out simply. "Usually it's doing a small favor for the inmate, then it boils into bigger favors, and then the inmate has the employee hooked."

Now some question whether Mitchell was even the real getaway plan—or just the pliable pawn who got them tools and, reportedly, let them use her cell phone as they plotted. "Knowing the entire universe is going to be looking for two guys and a blonde inside a car," asks Kerik, "they were going to get in that car with Joyce Mitchell? They would have to be complete morons." The prospect that Matt and Sweat had other transport in the wings leaves Jonathan Gilliam, a former FBI special agent who's hunted fugitives, none too optimistic that Matt and Sweat will be captured soon. "From what I have heard, I can't say police are hot on the trail of anything," says Gilliam.

Those who knew Mitchell as a doting mother to son Tobey, age 22, and a loving wife who enjoyed county fairs and NASCAR races with her husband can't understand how she was charmed by inmates. "Her self-esteem must be shot if she is looking for approval from murderers," says Helen Premo, who was married to Mitchell's first husband, Tobey. "This kind of blew everybody's mind. She is married with a son. She had a good job. She had a good, decent life. Now she threw it all away."

The Adventures of KATE & GEORGE!

FROM THE PALACE TO THE POLO FIELD, HOW THE NEW MOM AND HER ADORABLE SON ARE CHANGING THE ROYAL RULES

By SIMON PERRY & MICHELLE TAUBER

JUST ONE YEAR AGO

NO POMP, ALL PLAY
"He was sliding down the bank, and Kate joined him," an observer says of the royal mom and her son (on June 14).

Things Prince George likes: toys with wheels, sweet meringues, pulling his dad's nose, chasing his mom and waving to his adoring public. The one thing Prince George absolutely, positively, indisputably despises? Sitting still. Just shy of 2 years old, the future king is the sort of full-throttle toddler whose main mode is go—and the grown-ups in his life had better keep up or else. During the biggest weekend of his young life, George brimmed with energy from the historic Buckingham Palace balcony, where he made his debut on June 13, to the grassy sidelines of the polo field, where he rolled down a hill a day later. So when his mom, Princess Kate, took a 30-minute, kid-free, round-trip carriage ride for the annual Trooping the Colour parade just before the balcony moment, it might have been the longest "break" she had all weekend. "George doesn't let her have a minute to herself," says a source who spent time with Kate in recent days. "He's running around constantly."

And the modern mum is right beside him every hop and skip of the way. Blazing a royal parenting path first forged by her late mother-in-law, Princess Diana, 33-year-old Princess Kate is giving her kids—23-month-old Prince George and 7-week-old Princess Charlotte—a childhood in which grass stains are encouraged, public playgrounds are to be conquered, and no amount of love and affection is too much. The result: happy kids and a new era of royal family warmth in which even 89-year-old Queen Elizabeth seems to be smiling more broadly these days. (In what may be the surest sign of change yet, the monarch and husband Prince Philip, 94, joined their grandchildren for a night on the town at London wine bar Berry Bros. & Rudd on June 11.) "They have had a great month welcoming Charlotte into the family," a royal source tells People of Kate and husband Prince William, 33. "It was lovely to be able to celebrate with the Queen at Trooping the Colour and give people the chance to see Prince George."

The little heir didn't disappoint. Commanding the spotlight from his palace perch, George upstaged everyone from the woman of the hour—the Queen—to his mom, who revealed her post-baby body for the first time since Charlotte's May 2 birth (see box). On the polo field the next day alongside his young cousins, "George seemed to be a handful—a live wire," says veteran royals photographer Mark Stewart, who was on hand for both events. "Kate was running after him and making sure he was interacting with other children. She wasn't being precious with him— she wanted him to have a good old rough-and-tumble."

At home, Kate and William are enjoying the growing partnership that comes with raising two children together. George, they have told friends, is "great fun," while his sister is lower-key: Charles told well-wishers at a recent event that she is already sleeping through the night and is "much easier on Mum" than her brother at that age. With William keeping up a busy schedule of royal appearances, the family have been splitting time between their London home in Kensington Palace and their country home in Norfolk, Anmer Hall. As for Will's civilian job as an air ambulance pilot, "he wants to get started as soon as he can," says the royal source.

Kate's Fit Form

An active pregnancy and a clean diet have helped the new mom bounce back fast

Kate is in no hurry to resume her public duties. "She will be having much more time off with Charlotte" than she did following George's birth, says the source who recently spent time with her. She has help from nanny Maria Turrion Borrallo and mom Carole Middleton, and she and William hired a new Anmer Hall housekeeper, Sadie Rice, who previously helped care for three of the Norwegian royal children.

There is still one more big event to come this summer: Charlotte's christening at St. Mary Magdalene Church, near Anmer Hall, on July 5. "It is something they are looking forward to sharing with the local community," says the royal source. George is expected to join his parents on the public walk to the church—and will likely own the moment yet again. "There is something really strong and secure about him," says Majesty editor-in-chief Ingrid Seward. "Kate knows what she's doing."

FORMER NAACP LEADER RACHEL DOLEZAL

Her Secret Life

"Three years ago she asked me not to blow her cover," says her brother Ezra Dolezal, 22.

Rachel "was very well liked and popular as a child," her father says.

FROM TOP: YOUNG: KWAK/THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST INLANDER; COURTESY DOLEZAL FAMILY

FOR YEARS SHE PORTRAYED HERSELF AS A BLACK WOMAN. THEN HER PARENTS REVEALED THAT THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACTIVIST IS ACTUALLY WHITE. INSIDE HER STRANGE AND CONTROVERSIAL DECEPTION

Over the past decade Rachel Dolezal had built a career as an outspoken civil rights activist and expert on all things African-American, often using her own personal experiences to illustrate a point. "Coming from a transracial family that has hop-scotched to a variety of racial-tension areas, I have seen racial hatred in many forms," she told a Spokane, Wash., newspaper in 2012. A part-time instructor in the Africana Studies program at Eastern Washington University, Dolezal had lectured there on the history of black women and hair. And in an interview with another newspaper, she noted that a rash of recent conflicts between blacks and police "reminds us of our cultural memory of the strangling through the nooses." Dolezal's public profile only grew when she became head of the Spokane NAACP last November. But on June 11 her carefully constructed world came crashing down.

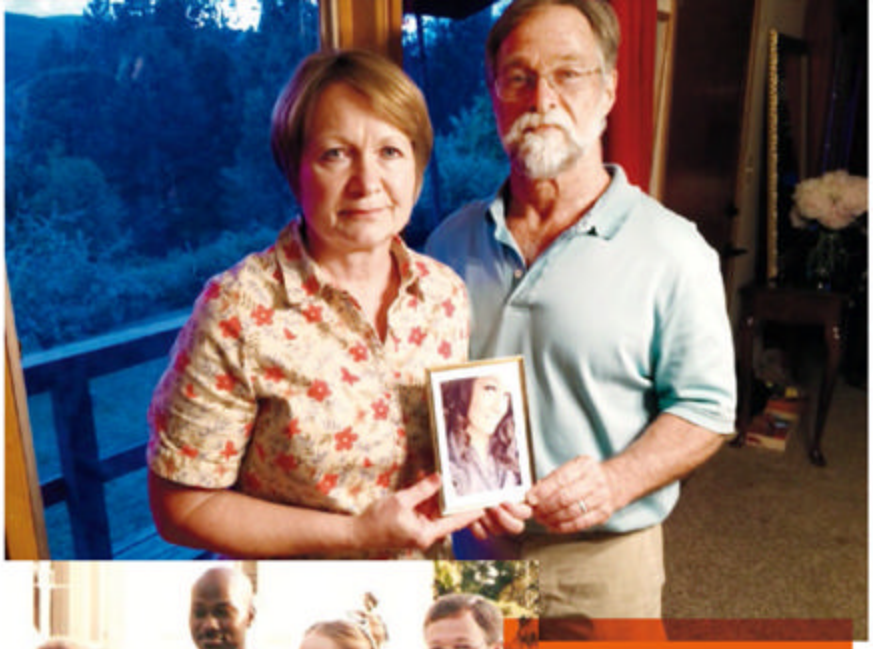

The Coeur d'Alene Press in Idaho published an interview with her parents, who revealed that their daughter was, in fact, not African-American but white, and showed a birth certificate and photos of her with strawberry blonde hair, freckles and pale skin to prove it. "We thought it was great she identified with African-Americans and was involved in their causes," her mother, Ruthanne Dolezal, of Troy, Mont., tells People. "But the deceptive part, when she was doing her makeup and wearing her hair to look like a black woman and saying she was, that is where she crossed the line."

'We didn't participate in lies. We won't. When we were asked, we were honest'
—RUTHANNE DOLEZAL

Though the local NAACP initially stood behind Rachel, saying "racial identity" neither qualified nor disqualified her for the post, three days later she announced via a statement posted on the chapter's Facebook site that she was stepping down. "I'm feeling good about things," she told People afterward. "I had to step down from that title to have a voice." At the same time, Eastern Washington University said she is no longer a part-time instructor there, while questions were being raised about the veracity of a spate of hate-crime complaints she had filed over the past six years in both Idaho and Washington. She also found herself the subject of an ethics investigation for allegedly lying about her ethnicity on an application for a position on Spokane's police ombudsman commission. Through it all Rachel continued to insist she is not white. "I actually don't like the term African-American," she told a local TV station. "I prefer black… and I would say, 'Yes, I do consider myself to be black.'" Yet in 2002, Rachel, who earned a master's in fine arts from Howard University, filed a discrimination suit against the school alleging she was passed over for a teaching position and scholarship aid at the predominantly black college because she was white. (The lawsuit was subsequently thrown out). As for her parents, she questioned the timing of their revelations, noting that a Colorado criminal case involving sexual-abuse allegations between two family members, which is set to go to trial this summer, is dividing the family.

Her parents say their reasons are much simpler. "We'd never been asked until a few days ago," says her father, Larry, 64. "We didn't take the initiative to contact anyone to try and set the record straight." The pair hesitated to speculate on why their daughter did what she did, though they note that her fascination with black culture grew after the family adopted three African-Americans and one Haitian child in the mid-'90s. "The more she learned about their civil rights struggles, she became more and more of an advocate," says her dad. "She really accepted the mantra 'black is beautiful.'"

By Nicole Weisensee Egan with Christine Pelisek and Diane Herbst

Rachel has always been "very good at doing makeup," says her mom (with husband Larry, above). "She could make herself look like any ethnicity." But she has no idea why her daughter (left, at her March 2000 wedding to now-ex-husband Kevin Moore) took it as far as she did. "She is not being rational," she says.

"It's doing blackface," says Ezra of his sister's deception (above, at a January teach-in and, below, at a rally in Spokane in March). "It was disrespectful."

BRYCE DALLAS HOWARD IS...

Red Hot!

JURASSIC WORLD'S HIGH-HEELED HEROINE IS HAVING A SIZZLING SUMMER—AND FOLLOWING IN HER FAMOUS DAD'S FOOTSTEPS

BY JULIE JORDAN

STEVE SCHOFIELD/CONTOUR BY GETTY IMAGES

"His wife, Anna [Faris], is amazing, and we'd have playdates with their son Jack," says Bryce of Jurassic costar Chris Pratt. "I just adore them."

Take Your Child to Work Day has a whole new meaning when dinosaurs are involved. So when Bryce Dallas Howard brought her kids Theo, 8, and Beatrice, 3, to the Jurassic World set, she was excited to show them the magic of movie-making. "It's the environment that I grew up in, so it's very sentimental to me," says the daughter of Oscar-winning director Ron Howard. And just like Bryce did as a child, Theo got to be an extra. "He hugged the neck of a baby dinosaur," she adds. "That's something I'll remember for the rest of my life. It's just magnificent."

It was especially sweet for Howard, 34, whose first major movie since 2011's The Help and becoming a mom of two turned out to be a Mosasaurus-size hit, setting a record for the biggest opening weekend ever. Howard was ready to return—after a few workout add-ons. "Running in heels is something I wasn't necessarily prepared to do," says the actress, whose high-strung executive character flees raptors in 3½-in. Sam Edelman pumps. She worked out with costar Chris Pratt and fashioned a platform to do calf raises every day: "I became fixated on having the strongest ankles imaginable!"

The oldest of four kids raised by Ron and mom Cheryl, both 61, Howard honed her work ethic from the start. On her father's sets, "I'd squeeze fresh orange juice for craft services, then take lunch and coffee orders, and eventually got to work as a PA," she recalls. On the way home, her dad would "talk to me as if I was a graduate apprentice in film school rather than a precocious, freckle-faced child," she says. "He was so curious as to what I thought."

After those extra gigs in her dad's movies, Howard made her own way, eventually landing roles in two films by director M. Night Shyamalan and a part in the Twilight Saga: Eclipse. Married since '06 to actor Seth Gabel, 33, whom she met in college at NYU, Howard struggled with postpartum depression after her son's birth and has since focused on keeping balance in her life. "What keeps me sane the most is honestly the Serenity Prayer," she says (though it's an AA mainstay, she has never touched alcohol). "It is a powerful idea to have the wisdom to know the difference between what you can control and what you can't." At home in Los Angeles she runs errands on a Razor scooter and strives to maintain the wonder she embraced as a child. "My dad would always tell me that I'd love being a grown-up," she says. "The older I get, the more lighthearted I feel." ●

Howard's husband, Seth Gabel (below, with her and her dad, Ron, in 2014), "is unbelievably supportive," she says. As a kid (right) Howard begged her dad "to bring me to set."

NO, SHE IS NOT JESSICA CHASTAIN!

Howard went viral with a video (1) lip-synching lyrics to a YouTube user's epic ballad: "I am not Jessica Chastain!"... which pal Chastain (2) posted. Even before they costarred in The Help, "people would say we looked like each other," says Howard (3, promoting the film together in 2011). "When we first met, we walked over to a mirror and compared faces."

CHAT ROOM TRAGEDY

PUSHED INTO SUICIDE?

Struggling with her depression, Nadia Kajouji looked to the Internet for friendship. What she found was far more sinister

BY PATRICK GOMEZ

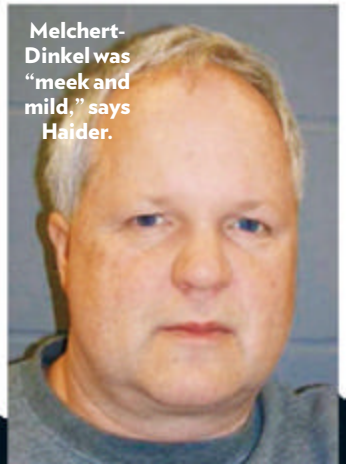

Nadia (in an undated photo) "had that something special," says her brother.

Nadia Kajouji's future seemed bright. Just 18, the freshman at Carleton University in Ottawa was "a smart, motivated young woman," says her brother Marc. But six months after moving into her dorm, the Brampton, Ont., native was overwhelmed by depression. In March 2008 she jumped to her death from a bridge over the icy Rideau River. A few weeks earlier she had written of her despair in an online forum: "I just want a quick out."

The ordeal was only beginning for Kajouji's family. "The stresses of school or being away from home got to her," says her brother. "She didn't have anyone around." Kajouji had suffered a miscarriage of an unplanned pregnancy and a breakup with her boyfriend but had hidden her darkest thoughts from loved ones. Instead, she had confided in someone: an online friend called Cami D, a self-described 31-year-old female nurse from Minneapolis, who encouraged her to end her life. "[If] it comes down to hanging I can help you with it with the cam," Cami D wrote, urging Kajouji to record the act. "I wonder how it will feel to actually die," Kajouji asked her friend. "Nice," Cami D replied.

The online chats were examined on the Deadline Crime episode (June 21 at 10 p.m.). In one exchange Cami D entered a suicide pact with Kajouji.

In reality Cami D was an invention of William Melchert-Dinkel, a nurse and father of two who used aliases in suicide-prevention chat rooms to urge people to kill themselves. Celia Blay, an English retiree, uncovered the activity while counseling individuals online and alerted authorities. "He was very unassuming," says retired St. Paul Police Sgt. Bill Haider, who confronted the nurse at his Faribault, Minn., home. "[But] he said five or six people may have committed suicide with his assistance."

Melchert-Dinkel was "meek and mild," says Haider.

The case, featured on a June 21 episode of Investigation Discovery's Deadline Crime with Tamron Hall, raises questions about what can be done to stop such activity. In May 2011 Melchert-Dinkel, now 52, was sentenced to prison for 360 days for "intentionally" pushing someone to commit suicide. But the Minnesota Supreme Court reversed the conviction on first amendment grounds. "It was immoral, but that doesn't mean it was illegal," his lawyer Terry Watkins told Deadline Crime.

But Kajouji's family is grateful that Melchert-Dinkel has been exposed. "I appreciate the awareness," says Marc, now a suicide-prevention activist who works with yourlifecounts.org. "Nothing is going to bring my sister back, but if I can help another family, I think that I've done all I can." ●

At Home With Audrey

AUDREY HEPBURN'S SON SHARES MEMORIES OF HIS MOM'S PRIVATE SIDE—AND HER FAVORITE RECIPES (YES, SHE LOVED SPAGHETTI!)

By LIZ McNEIL

Rome, 1970
"She was more interested in our schoolwork, our girlfriends, our life, than talking about her career or fashion," says Luca.

Switzerland, 1987
Hepburn (with her Jack Russell terriers) "was never someone who wanted more, more, more," says Luca.

Rome, 1954
"She was a country girl who liked simple things," says Luca of his Belgian-born mom.

Beverly Hills, 1953
Hepburn (in her rental apartment while filming Sabrina) later had a family chef.

Audrey Hepburn loved cozy breakfasts of toast with red cherry jam and leisurely lunches of spaghetti with tomato sauce. "She didn't live her life as an icon," says her son Luca Dotti, 45, who shares family photos and his mom's favorite recipes in his new book, Audrey at Home, excerpted here. "The kind of person she was shows in her cooking. She never wanted to overdo." Despite her ethereal elegance, the star of Breakfast at Tiffany's was happiest with her two sons at their Swiss farmhouse. "There are a million better cooks than my mother," says Luca. "But having her kids around the table was her greatest joy."

I never knew Audrey Hepburn. As a little boy, when a group of journalists persistently asked me about her, I responded somewhat annoyed, "You are mistaken, I am the son of Mrs. Dotti." They burst out laughing. Mum was adorable, of course, but I did not find her the least bit exciting. It was a time when people didn't talk much about her—Mum was no longer acting and the "cult" phase had yet to begin. When my friends came over to our house for the first time, they were curious, as their heads had been filled with whatever their parents had told them about their experiences with Audrey, through the films she made and the magazines they read. Any awk-

Hepburn's pet deer Pippin appeared in her film Green Mansions and briefly lived with her before moving to a zoo.

Switzerland, ca. 1970
Hepburn (at her Tolochenaz home) preferred sauce from homegrown tomatoes.

Turkey, 1968
"One day at breakfast, years after her divorce and a few years before she died [in 1993], my mother told me the reason she married my father and had me was love," says Luca. "She wanted me to know."

wardness, however, vanished, as soon as they got to know her.

In the late '60s, Hepburn left Hollywood behind to focus on family. She had two sons: Sean Ferrer, from her first marriage to actor Mel Ferrer, and Luca, with her second husband, Italian psychiatrist Andrea Dotti.

The Academy Award for Best Actress that she won for Roman Holiday was wedged among the books on the shelves of the playroom at La Paisible, our home in the tiny Swiss village of Tolochenaz. To journalists who were amazed at her early retirement from the screen, she explained, "It was what I most wanted to do. It's sad if people think it's a dull existence, but you can't just buy an apartment and furnish it and walk away. It's the flowers you choose, the music you play, the smile you have waiting."

She was famous for her slender figure but had a hearty appetite.

Mum had a serious addiction. She couldn't do without pasta. She would eat it at home and request it at restaurants, with slight embarrassment

'In fashion she started with Givenchy, but at the end of her life, she was much happier in jeans and a T-shirt. Her recipes followed that theme. Back to basics'

Spaghetti al Pomodoro

"She would eat it almost every day," says Luca. "Now I make it for my kids," Vincenzo, 14, Marta, 5, and Alice, 3.

- 3 lbs. vine-ripened tomatoes, cored and coarsely diced
- 1 onion, peeled
- 1 stalk celery
- 1 carrot
- 6 basil leaves, chopped, plus more for garnish
- Extra-virgin olive oil
- Pinch sugar
- Salt
- Freshly cracked black pepper
- 1 lb. spaghetti
- Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese, grated

1. In a large covered pan over high heat, cook the tomatoes, onion, celery and carrot for about 10 minutes to soften the vegetables.
2. Remove the lid and continue boiling for another 10 to 15 minutes, stirring with a wooden spoon.
3. Lower the heat to medium-low and add the chopped basil and a drizzle of oil. The tomato sauce is ready when, as they say in Naples, "pipiotta," when the bubbles are no longer made of water but rather small craters of sauce. Remove from the stove, discard the largest vegetable chunks, and allow the sauce to cool.
4. A stainless-steel food mill—the hand-operated type—is necessary once the cooking is complete in order to transform the tomato sauce and pieces of vegetables into a puree of the right consistency. (Editor's Note: If you don't have a food mill, use a food processor.) It will also remove the bitter skins and tomato seeds.
5. Add a drizzle of olive oil and adjust bitterness with a pinch of sugar. Season with salt and pepper.
6. Cook the spaghetti al dente in boiling salted water. Drain and add the pasta to the sauce with a sprinkle of Parmigiano-Reggiano. Toss well and garnish with a few leaves of basil.

Chocolate Cake

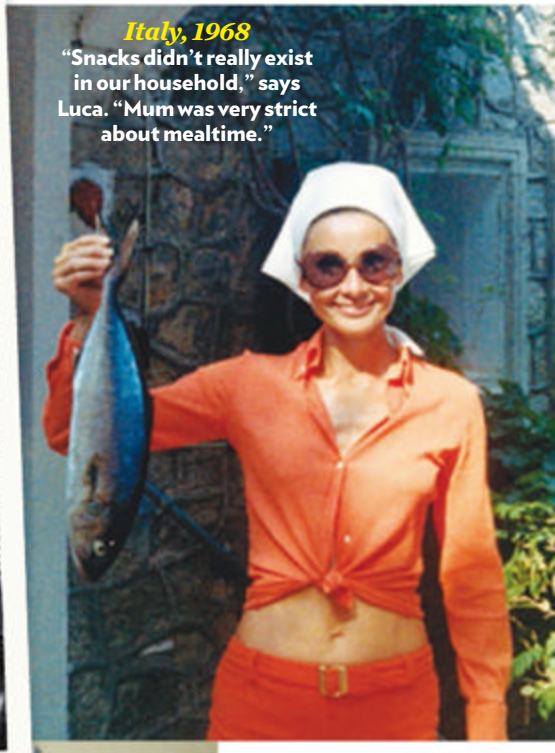

Hepburn's favorite for birthdays and special occasions, this flourless cake is thin and moist, but it should form a slight crust.

11 oz. unsweetened dark chocolate, chopped
¼ cup whole milk
1 stick unsalted butter, cut into small pieces, plus extra for greasing
8 eggs, separated
1 cup sugar
Flour for pan
Powdered sugar

1. Preheat the oven to 400°F. Butter and flour a 10- or 12-in. round baking pan.
2. Melt the chocolate with the milk in a bain-marie (a heatproof bowl set over a saucepan of simmering water). Add the butter and stir to blend thoroughly. Turn off the heat, add the egg yolks and mix.
3. In a separate bowl, gradually add the sugar to the egg whites and whip to form stiff peaks. Gently fold into the chocolate-egg yolk mixture. Pour into the prepared pan.
4. Bake for 30 minutes. Turn off the oven, open the door and leave the cake inside for a few minutes (this will prevent the crust from cracking). Remove from the oven and cool for about 10 minutes before removing from the pan. Cool completely before serving. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream.
Serves: 8 to 10

Rome, 1973
"I had no idea she was a movie star," says Luca (with his mom and her close friend Connie Wald). "The first time I saw her kissing Gary Cooper in Love in the Afternoon, I got very upset."

Italy, 1968
"Snacks didn't really exist in our household," says Luca. "Mum was very strict about mealtime."

Rome, 1971
Luca celebrated his first birthday with Hepburn and his father, Andrea Dotti.

Luca, now a graphic designer who lives in Rome, says his mom would eat her favorite junk food, pasta with ketchup, "when no one was around."

'She ate chocolate every day. She had a special drawer where she'd put it, and it was forbidden to touch. It was one of her favorite little pick-me-ups'

when they would present her with elaborate and ambitious menus: "If it isn't too complicated, a lovely, simple pasta al pomodoro with a bit of olive oil would make me so happy."

As a young child I never thought of Mum as being fat or thin, but I recall that friends and relatives were amazed at how she managed to never put on weight. Mum, however, did not limit herself to tasting elegant, minimalist portions; she would help herself to second servings of plates overflowing with pasta. I remember one of our last trips together. We had just arrived in Jamaica, and [her companion] Robert [Wolders] picked up her suitcases to take them to the room. The large one, which held her clothing and things for the beach, was light. The other one was small but heavy. "What did you put in here, bricks?" he asked. "Spaghetti," Mum answered with a satisfied smile. She hadn't forgotten the olive oil and Parmigiano-Reggiano either. ●

MY FATHER'S TRANSITION TO CARLY

'We're Still a Family'

People FAMILY PORTRAIT

AS HIS FATHER TRANSITIONS FROM MALE TO FEMALE, TEEN BEN LEHWALD OPENS UP ABOUT ADJUSTING TO HIS FAMILY'S NEW REALITY

BY LYNETTE RICE

When Ben Lehwald was 14, the Evanston, Ill., teen was called away from playing Xbox in his bedroom for a family meeting in the backyard. Already reeling from the revelation that his mother, Suzy, and his father, Charlie, were divorcing after 16 years of marriage, Ben, now 17, assumed the news was only going to get worse. "My initial thought was that I was going to get into trouble. Did I stay up too late? Did I buy too many songs on iTunes?" he recalls. "I started getting really scared. And then there was a curveball."

It was at that moment that Ben learned his dad, then a 46-year-old information-security expert, was transitioning from male to female. At first

Ben didn't know how to react. "I had no clue that it was even a thing," he says of learning what it meant to be transgender. "I was just used to having a dad and mom. That's how I thought things were always going to be." Then he started to worry about the challenges facing both his mom and his dad, who would eventually adopt a new female identity as Carly. "I knew that people don't necessarily agree with what everybody does in life," says Ben, sitting down to an interview in the apartment he shares with his mother, who has primary custody, last month. "My first thought was, 'Is my dad going to be okay just walking down the street and being out in public?' It's kind of just a question mark, and you never know. It's horrible and it's scary."

Now, three years after the initial revelation, the family members are sharing their journey on a new ABC Family docuseries, Becoming Us. "You are going to see a normal-day family living their everyday life but with a twist," says Ben, whose girlfriend Danielle Molnar—also a teen with a father transitioning to female—is featured on the show. Having the cameras document the family hasn't always been easy: They began filming just as Carly was preparing to undergo gender-reassignment surgery. Though Ben felt confident the procedure would turn out fine, he still struggles to understand Carly's sexuality. "This is where it gets confusing," says Ben, who refers to Carly by name because, post-transition, she doesn't like to be called Dad. "Carly is technically straight. I really wondered, why do it? If you are gonna date women, why do it, you know?"

Questions about a transgender parent's sexuality are not only normal; they are part of the grieving process, explains Dr. Gail Gross, a Houston-based behavioral psychologist. "Children grieve the loss of that parent they identify with as, in this case, the father," she says. "Anything that can be answered

'I feel really fortunate and privileged to have the transition that I have had'
—CARLY LEHWALD

"It's really important for people to see all that has happened in this situation and how it affected all of us individually," says Ben's mom, Suzy (center, with Ben and Carly, far right, and, above, with Ben and Carly before the transition, ca. 2008).

in a comfortable way that's age-appropriate will help."

In Ben's case, filming the show about the family's experience was therapeutic. "Seeing someone do it really helps you understand that whole thing," says the teen, who just finished his junior year of high school. "There's this person in our lives who we don't really know."

That's because for years, Carly left her family in the dark about her gender dysphoria. Looking back, Ben admits there were signs that Carly was experimenting with her identity—like the time, before the transition, that he saw Carly wearing nail polish or when he caught her shaving her legs. In fact, his early experiences with Carly made it easy for him to recognize what was happening to Caitlyn Jenner, who notably confessed to Diane Sawyer that she privately wore nail polish before coming forward about her transition in April. Says Ben: "She had all the same signs as Carly." At the same time, Suzy, 58, knew her husband secretly cross-dressed, but she looked the other way. "I made adjustments because I wanted to keep my marriage together."

'It makes me happy knowing this show could change something'
—BEN LEHWALD

What Ben and his mom didn't know was how Carly, in addition to battling an addiction to alcohol, had also been seeing a psychiatrist and taking hormones for years before opening up to her family. "It was worse than cheating on somebody," recalls Carly, now 49 and sober. "It was tough on my wife." Ben remembers their house becoming "quiet and awkward," so he'd retreat to his bedroom to play online games. Suzy says she was grateful for the distraction. "He seemed to be relaxed. It was also the only time he laughed! It was a way for him to decompress."

And while the docuseries made him relive some painful moments, Ben's a happy and outgoing teen. "I can't say enough about him," says Suzy of her son. "He's remarkable." ●

"My friends are accepting," says Jazz (before accepting the Voice for Equality award last November in Florida). "They stick up for me if anyone says something mean."

Growing Up Transgender

When she was only 5, Jazz Jennings became one of the youngest people ever to be diagnosed with gender dysphoria. Designated male at birth in 2000, the now 14-year-old first told her parents she identified as a girl as soon as she could talk. "I was just being who I am," Jazz tells People of her decision to begin presenting as female before starting kindergarten in 2006. Just a year later Jazz and her family went public with their story for a 20/20 interview with Barbara Walters. "It was a tough decision for our family," says Jazz, adding that she felt fearful of a public backlash. "They would ask me, 'Are you okay putting yourself out there? Kids might be mean to you once they know you're transgender,' but they told me if I do share my story, I could help other kids like me and that I could make a difference. Once they said that, I knew I had to." After she went public, "there was a lot of discrimination," she recalls. "Some parents were rude and didn't want me using the girls' bathroom, and kids scooted away from me at lunch." But the decision was worth it, Jazz says. Now she is also starring in a new reality series, I Am Jazz, premiering July 15 at 10 p.m. on TLC. "I've faced challenges along the way, but I was lucky to have a supportive family who accepted me and gave me unconditional love right from the start," she says. "I have to continue sharing my story to give other kids the courage to keep moving forward and to keep loving themselves. Everyone deserves the right to be loved."

Legal Notice

If You Shopped at Target from November 27 through December 18, 2013 or

Received Notice That Your Personal Information Was Compromised,

You Could Get Money from a Data Breach Settlement.

A Settlement has been proposed in lawsuits against Target Corporation ("Target") relating to Target customers whose credit/debit card information or personal information was stolen as a result of a data breach that was first disclosed on December 19, 2013 ("Target Data Breach").

Who is included in the Settlement?

You are a member of the Class if: (1) you shopped at a Target store and used your credit or debit card from November 27-December 18, 2013; (2) you provided your contact information to Target before December 18, 2013; or (3) your bank, credit card company, or other financial institution issued you a new credit or debit card shortly after December 2013 and informed you that your old card may have been compromised. If you received a notice directly about the Target Data Breach, you are a Class Member.

What does the Settlement provide?

The $10 million Settlement Fund will provide payments to consumers who have had losses caused by the Target Data Breach. If you are included, you can choose between two types of payments:

- If you have documentation, you can receive reimbursement of losses up to $10,000. These losses include unauthorized, unreimbursed charges; certain costs and fees; and lost or restricted access to funds among other things.
- If you do not have documentation, you may be eligible for an equal share of the Settlement Fund remaining after payment of claims for documented losses and service payments. For example, if the total of service payments awarded by the Court plus documented claims adds up to $1 million and 300,000 Settlement Class Members submit valid claims without documentation, you will receive $30 from the Settlement Fund. The amount of actual payments will depend on the amount of claims received.

How can I get a payment?

Submit a Claim Form online or by mail by July 31, 2015.

What are my rights?

Even if you do nothing, you will be bound by the Court's decisions. If you want to keep your right to sue Target yourself, you must exclude yourself from the Settlement by July 31, 2015. If you stay in the Settlement, you may object to it by July 31, 2015. The Court will hold a hearing on November 10, 2015 to consider whether to approve the Settlement, a request for attorneys' fees and costs up to $6,750,000 to be paid by Target, and service payments of up to $500 each for the Settlement Class Representatives (up to $1,000 each for three Class Representatives who were deposed). You or your own lawyer may appear and speak at the hearing at your own expense.

Garlic Bread Croissants

THE CHEF OFFERS AN AT-HOME VERSION OF A POPULAR DISH FROM HIS NEW N.Y.C. RESTAURANT DOMINIQUE ANSEL KITCHEN

DOMINIQUE ANSEL

- 1 head garlic, separated and peeled
- Extra-virgin olive oil
- ½ sprig fresh rosemary, plus more for garnish
- 1 small bunch fresh thyme, plus more for garnish
- Freshly cracked black pepper
- 3-4 medium-size store-bought croissants
- Kosher salt
- Small wedge Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese, grated

1. Preheat oven to 250°. Place the garlic cloves in a small, shallow, oven-proof pot or pan. Cover with olive oil until cloves are submerged. Add rosemary, thyme and black pepper to taste.
2. Cook in oven for 1½ hours or until the cloves are tender and aromatic. Set aside and let cool completely, allowing the garlic and herbs to steep in the oil.
3. Split open the croissants lengthwise, and toast in the oven for a few minutes, until slightly browned. Place a few garlic cloves and a drizzle of the garlic oil on the warm croissants. Finish with a sprinkle of salt, grated cheese and chopped herbs.
Serves: 4 to 6
Prep time: 10 minutes, plus cooling
Cook time: 1 hour 30 minutes

Spiked Watermelon Mint Pops

THE CELEBRITY CATERER SHARES A FUN SUMMER TREAT FOR GROWN-UPS

- 1 (2- to 3-lb.) seedless watermelon
- ¼ cup triple sec
- 24 lollipop sticks
- 24 small mint leaves

1. Slice the watermelon into ⅓-in.-thick slices, and use a 1½-in. cookie cutter to stamp out rounds.
2. Pour the triple sec into a baking dish, and soak the watermelon in a single layer for about 1 minute, then flip the rounds over. Continue soaking for at least 4 hours and up to 8 hours.
3. Insert a lollipop stick into the center of each round, and press a mint leaf on top. Serve immediately or slightly chilled in the fridge.
Makes: 24
Prep time: 10 minutes, plus soaking time

Chef's Tip

'For a nonalcoholic version, toss them in orange simple syrup,' says Callahan. 'Boil 1 cup water, 1 cup sugar and 2 tbsp. orange juice, stirring until sugar dissolves, and let cool'

FOOD, FASHION AND HOSPITALITY COME TOGETHER AT THIS STYLISH NEW YORK CITY RESTAURANT

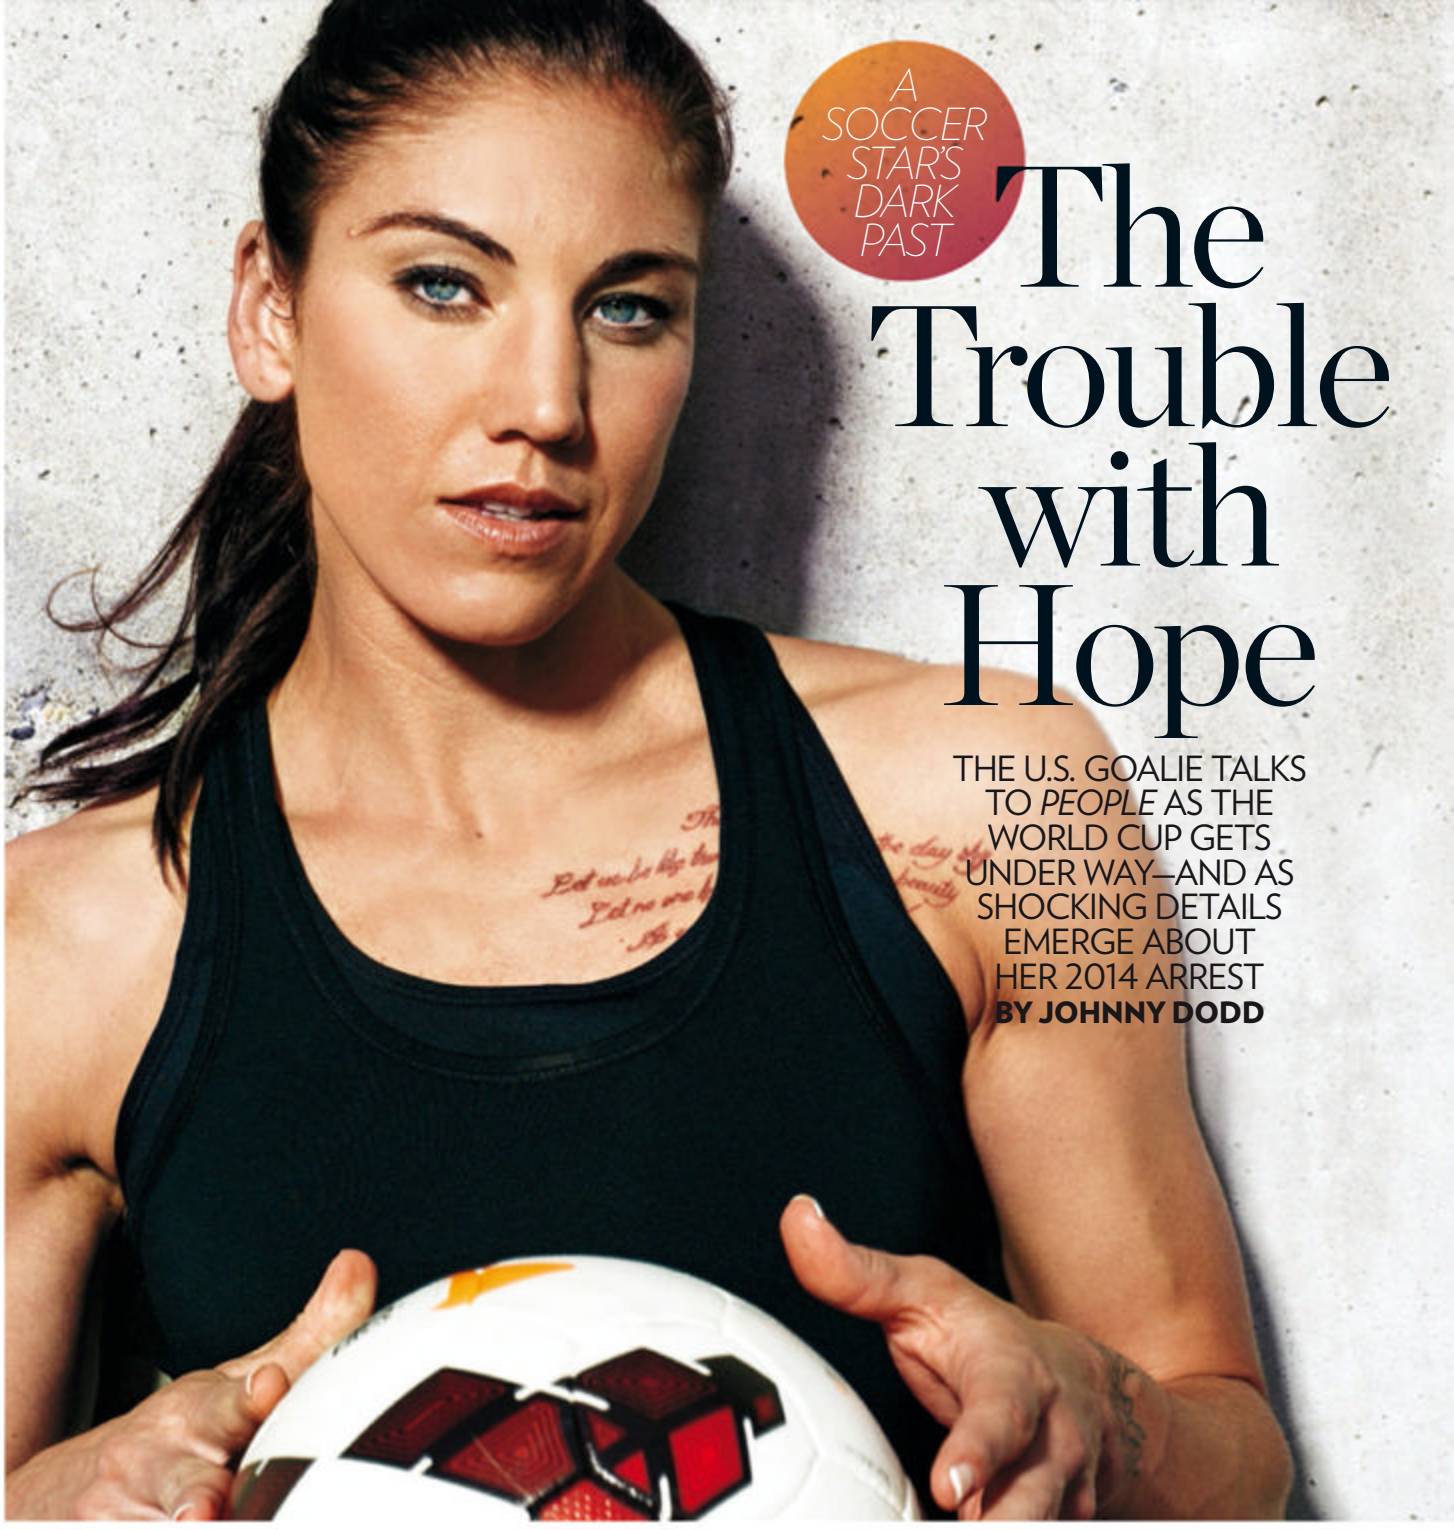

When designer Ralph Lauren looked for inspiration for his first Manhattan restaurant, he channeled "the spirit and culture of the city" and "of course, the people who give it life and personality." The result: the Polo Bar, the fashionably cozy eatery that draws A-list celebrities, fashion icons and avid foodies alike. While surrounded by equestrian-style decor and tucked into soft-leather booths, guests dine on classic American comfort food like Lauren's signature corned beef sandwich, kale caesar salad and bacon cheeseburger served with "Ralph's Special Sauce" (recipe above). "When you walk through the door, I want you to feel immediately at home," Lauren said. "And when you leave, I want you to look forward to returning soon."

A SOCCER STAR'S DARK PAST

The Trouble with Hope

THE U.S. GOALIE TALKS TO PEOPLE AS THE WORLD CUP GETS UNDER WAY—AND AS SHOCKING DETAILS EMERGE ABOUT HER 2014 ARREST

BY JOHNNY DODD

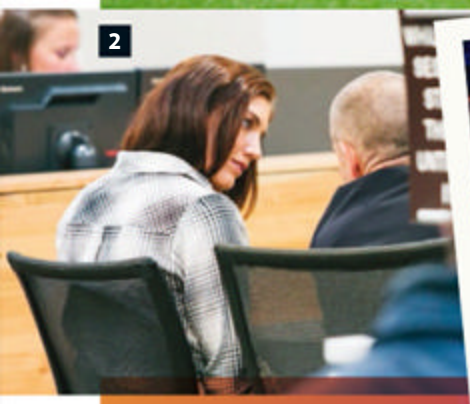

"People see me as the troublemaker, the one filled with drama," says Solo.

Hope Solo wanted to put it all behind her. Widely regarded as the greatest female goalkeeper on the planet, the embattled 33-year-old soccer sensation thought she could finally move on from a messy, roller-coaster year that included her arrest in June 2014 for assaulting her half sister and nephew and her suspension from the U.S. Women's National Team after her husband, retired NFL player Jerramy Stevens, 35, was arrested for driving drunk in the team van. (Solo was in the passenger seat.) "It's been painful," Solo told People a few weeks before the start of the Women's World Cup, which is now under way in Canada. "I almost lost my career. It's been traumatic and embarrassing."

But the past has a way of creeping back into the present. In recent days, Solo has once again been making headlines for all the wrong reasons after her half sister Teresa Obert went public with details from the alleged assault, and a police report surfaced painting a damning picture of Solo, who told

JOSE MANDOJANA

HIGHS & LOWS
1. Solo helped the U.S. clinch its World Cup opener on June 8. 2. She appeared in court following her 2014 arrest. 3. The soccer star with Maksim Chmerkovskiy on Dancing with the Stars in 2012. 4. Solo and husband Jerramy Stevens, whom she wed in 2012 one day after he was arrested for allegedly assaulting her. (Charges were never filed.) 5. She and teammate Abby Wambach celebrated their gold medals at the 2012 London Olympics.

one officer, "If the handcuffs were off, I'd kick your ass." Soon her former coach Pia Sundhage, sports commentator Keith Olbermann and even U.S. Senator Richard Blumenthal were denouncing her, with some critics demanding that she be yanked from the U.S. Soccer roster.

According to the incident report, officers from the Kirkland, Wash., police department arrived at Obert's home after midnight on June 21, 2014, and were told that Solo had "repeatedly punched" Obert's then-17-year-old son in the face. The 6′9″, 280-lb. teen said that he eventually "broke" a wooden broom over Solo's head in an effort to get her to "stop assaulting" his mother. (Attorneys for Obert declined repeated requests for comment.) Solo has claimed she used force only to defend herself, telling officers that her nephew "repeatedly" hit her over the head.

'I wish my name was cleared. But people still believe that I hit a child'
—HOPE SOLO

By January 2015 the case had been dismissed after Obert and her son left the state to avoid giving a court-ordered deposition. "It's not often that a judge dismisses a case," explains legal analyst and Seattle attorney Anne Bremner, adding that it's done only in "exceptional circumstances."

For Solo the dismissal—which prosecutors are appealing—was bittersweet. "I wish my name was cleared," she says. "But people still believe that I hit a child." As for her clash with police, her attorney Todd Maybrown says she was simply "upset and emotional after being wrongfully arrested."

For now, at least, her position with the U.S. team is secure. "Hope's been fantastic and we've moved on," coach Jill Ellis said the night before the team's first-round victory over Australia, during which Solo's game-saving performance impressed even her harshest critics. And for the next few weeks of World Cup competition, Solo will undoubtedly fight to stay focused on soccer as the chaos swirls around her. "It's been awful," she says. "But I'm at peace." ●

ROAD TO RECOVERY

An Abused Dog's Second Chance

Tortured but resilient, 15-month-old Caitlyn is thriving after surgery

BY JENNIFER HEYDE

When the Charleston Animal Society's Aldwin Roman responded to a May 27 call reporting a local dog with her mouth taped shut, he was not prepared for what he found. "I've never seen anything like it," Roman, who heads up the organization's anticruelty efforts, says of Caitlyn, a young Staffordshire terrier mix whose muzzle had been bound with electrical tape. "I've been on dog-fighting raids, but the condition of her snout was just horrific." (A South Carolina man, William Leonard Dodson, 41, has since been arrested in connection with the case.) Fortunately, after undergoing two surgeries on her lips, cheeks and chin, Caitlyn is expected to make a full recovery. A sweet puppy from the outset—"she was wagging her tail even with her muzzle taped," says vet Lucy Fuller, who initially treated her—the pup is also coming out of her shell and is even doing outreach work with kids. "She's so playful," says Roman, who thinks Caitlyn will be moved to foster care soon. "Hopefully she can put this behind her and live a happy life." ●

Caitlyn (on June 8) continues to heal at the Veterinary Specialty Care center in Mount Pleasant, S.C.

Nicole Scherzinger

What I Eat in a Day

'I DON'T DEPRIVE MYSELF,' SAYS THE 5'6" SINGER, 37, WHO CAN BE SEEN IN NBC'S I CAN DO THAT. 'I EAT EVERYTHING IN MODERATION'

Hydration

6 to 8 glasses of water

Breakfast

½ cup oatmeal
1 tbsp. agave
½ banana
Cinnamon to taste
1 cup organic English Breakfast tea with 1 tsp. brown sugar and a splash of whole milk

Lunch

1 can strained light albacore tuna
2 cups arugula
½ cup cherry tomatoes
½ avocado
1 tbsp. olive oil
1 tbsp. balsamic reduction

Snack

1 cup pickled mangoes ("Made by my uncle in Hawaii," says Scherzinger)

Tip! "Choose a sustainable sea bass like branzino," says Glassman. "It's good for your health and the environment."

Dinner

3 oz. seared sea bass
½ cup brown rice
1 cup grilled mixed vegetables
1 tbsp. olive oil

Dessert

A handful of dark-chocolate-covered almonds

Total Calories: 1,875

The Verdict "Overall, Nicole is a very healthy eater," says dietitian Keri Glassman of NutritiousLife.com. "For breakfast she could skip the sugar in the tea since she already got a dose from the agave, but her lunch is perfection—a good mix of antioxidants, lean protein, healthy fat and calcium." Glassman also approves of Scherzinger's dessert: "She allows herself an indulgence, so she doesn't feel deprived. I am impressed!"

YOUR SUMMER HAIR GUIDE

IT'S THE PERFECT TIME OF YEAR TO SWITCH UP YOUR LOOK. START WITH ANY OF THESE FRESH IDEAS

TRY A BRAIDED BUN

The model's top knot only looks difficult. L'Oréal Professionnel hairstylist Matthew Collins first pulled Hadid's hair into a high pony before separating it into two braided sections—gently pulling each apart to add texture. Then he wrapped one braid around the base, followed by the other. Pin, and voilà!

GIGI HADID

GEORGE PIMENTEL/WIREIMAGE

CHOP IT OFF

If you've been thinking about going shorter, let these cuts motivate you to finally do it. Try a collarbone-grazing lob or a bob that hits 1 to 1½ inches below the chin. And ask for a few layers to create movement.

ROSIE HUNTINGTON-WHITELEY

JESSICA ALBA

MINDY KALING

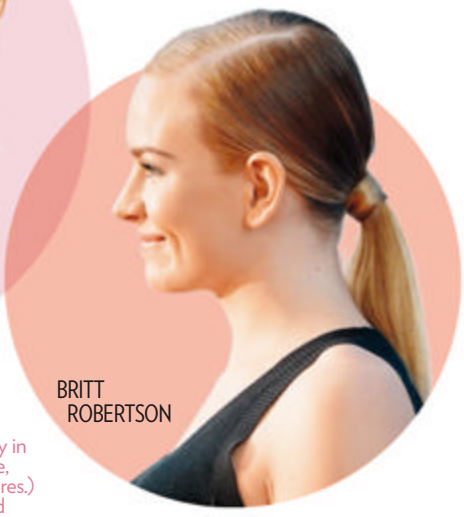

Kaling's hairstylist Christopher Naselli cut off almost 10 inches!

FREIDA PINTO

BELLA THORNE

BRITT ROBERTSON

AMP UP YOUR PONY

The ponytail is the LBD of summer hairstyles: You can easily dress it up or down. To make it feel fancy in seconds, wrap a small section of hair around the base, then secure with a pin. (It works on curly and sleek textures.) Robertson's pro Toni&Guy hairstylist Christian Wood suggests quickly curling the section with an iron first. It'll hold better—and keep stray pieces from poking out.

MAKE WAVES

Surfer girls come by this look naturally. The rest of us need a little help from a combo of texture-enhancing products and strategic scrunching. Try a lightweight foam (bottom left) if you have fine hair, or a gel (bottom right) for medium to thick hair.

GET YOUR HAIR OFF YOUR FACE

Humidity is the worst, especially if you have bangs or face-framing layers that pouf up in steamy weather. Avoid a style meltdown by braiding the pieces along your hairline into a supercute, sweat-proof, half-up do.

GO (REALLY) BLONDE

Michelle Williams is our platinum inspiration. Maintaining this "edgy" hue takes commitment, says the star's colorist Marie Robinson. That means regular salon visits and a solid product regimen. We love these fab new finds.

One Last Thing

Edie Falco

Catch the actress, 51, in Showtime's Nurse Jackie finale, airing June 28

Last time I laughed
My daughter [Macy] is only 7, but she said something the other day, and I remember thinking, "Holy mackerel, she's old enough to make me laugh now." It'll just be her take on things, but she's legitimately a funny kid.

Last TV obsession
I just finished the British series Broadchurch. I had been watching Downton Abbey on Amazon Prime and it said, "You also might like Broadchurch." I clicked on it and they were right!

Last thing I lost
I lost my phone a week ago. I was in a panic trying to backtrack where I had been. Thank God for the Find My iPhone app. There it was at the gym, just like the green dot on my computer said.

Last thing I cooked
I don't cook! But I just made mac and cheese for my kids. I use the Kraft out-of-a-box kind. I've tried it other ways, but that's what my kids want.

Last good deed
This morning at Starbucks I held the door open for a woman coming in with a stroller. For some reason, someone holding a door for me is very moving. They don't know me. I don't know them. We don't even exchange a glance, but there is something that I love about it.
